➤ Burberry's trademark plaid pattern now has a distinctive counterpart developed for women by creative director Christopher Bailey, who was inspired by the Burberry The Beat fragrances. The new check is in black, charcoal and white and it's being added to accessories, including bags, leather goods and shoes as well as ready-to-wear pieces. Best of all is the popular Lowry bag (pictured), now available in the new look. The Burberry Spring 2009 collection is in store, priced from $1300. Contact Burberry on (02) 9238 0978.

➤ Just over a year ago, Caroline Cox, Kaye Crane and Tanya Davidson joined forces to create the shoe brand Tilly Rose, and their Spring Summer 2008 collection is one of their most ambitious yet. There are sandals, gladiators, race wear, ballerinas and evening wear in lovely textured materials and bright colours. Sister brand Bette Belle offers wedges and platforms. There is also the Tilly Rose Riviera collection which is a series of fabulous flats from bejewelled to strappy. Prices range from $150 to $260. See www.tillyrose.com.au or phone 9555 4746 for more information.

➤ At the recent Jewellery Fair in Vicenza, Italy — the largest jewellery exhibition in the world — one of the most popular design trends was the combination of rose and white gold with yellow gold. The Australian-made Surreal jewellery charm range has adopted this trend of using the three different golds in the latest collection. Bracelets are priced from $1495 and gold charms start from $115. Surreal's exclusive range of jewel-encrusted charms are priced from $415. www.surrealjewellery.com or call 1800 SURREAL
